25X1

Approved For Release	2009/02/05	· CIA-RDP86M00	0886R000600110024-
Approved For Iverease	2003/02/03	. CIA-INDE GOIVIO	J0001\000000 1 1002 4 -

25X1

DCI CONFERENCE OPENING REMARKS

First, let me welcome all of you back for me third in what is now a series of offsite management meetings. I find mese sessions to be particularly useful in that they free us from the demands immediate problems and provide us with the opportunity to focus on onger-term concerns.	2
I nope to continue this tradition by scheduling approximately two such setings a year, although the objectives of each meeting are likely to change rom one to another. Last August I was most concerned about coordinating our adgetary presentations to Congress and avoiding surprises; in December I inted to begin to focus our collective attention on longer-term anning-related issues.
The focus of this conference is to examine and discuss several specific sues, which may have substantial budgetary implications for the Community wer many years to come, and attempt to come to some understanding as to how will address each. These particular issues were selected for discussion cause at this time they demand our collective attention to resolve them in the best manner possible.
	2
Second, there are aspects of what we have come to call the unconventional areat - Third World instability and insurgency and the problem of surge apability - that would benefit from our collective wisdom. Our discussion on the instability and insurgency should refer to such events as Iran, Lebanon and Grenada, to highlight some of the lessons learned, to identify areas where a can improve our procedures, and to think about the best coordinating accounts to insure that intelligence warnings are brought to policymakers attention in a systematic and timely manner.
	2
	e third in what is now a series of offsite management meetings. I find ese sessions to be particularly useful in that they free us from the demands immediate problems and provide us with the opportunity to focus on inger-term concerns. I hope to continue this tradition by scheduling approximately two such eetings a year, although the objectives of each meeting are likely to change om one to another. Last August I was most concerned about coordinating our digetary presentations to Congress and avoiding surprises; in December I need to begin to focus our collective attention on longer-term anning-related issues. The focus of this conference is to examine and discuss several specific sues, which may have substantial budgetary implications for the Community er many years to come, and attempt to come to some understanding as to how will address each. These particular issues were selected for discussion cause at this time they demand our collective attention to resolve them in the best manner possible. Second, there are aspects of what we have come to call the unconventional interest. Third World instability and insurgency and the problem of surge pability - that would benefit from our collective wisdom. Our discussion one instability and insurgency should refer to such events as Iran, Lebanon and Grenada, to highlight some of the lessons learned, to identify areas where can improve our procedures, and to think about the best coordinating contains to insure that intelligence warnings are brought to policymakers

25X1

je je	25X1
	25X1

Approved For Release 2009/02/05: CIA-RDP86M00886R000600110024-1

Sixth, we have raised the subject of manpower on several occassions in the past, but have yet to settle on an appropriate Community initiative to address our concerns. I would like us to decide at this meeting whether any aspect of the manpower issue is of Community concern, and if so what the nature of the Community response ought to be.

Finally, we must bear in mind that these efforts all have budgetary implications which can have a significant impact on the NFIP in the outyears. The question of affordability is one that we will be wrestling with over the next couple of years. I look forward to an interesting and stimulating meeting.

TOP SECRET

25X1